WEEK OF AUGUST 15

The Cape Playhouse finds it difficult to finance during its first season the various improvements and extentions necessary for its fullest development. These things are needed:

Cushions for seats — Landscaping

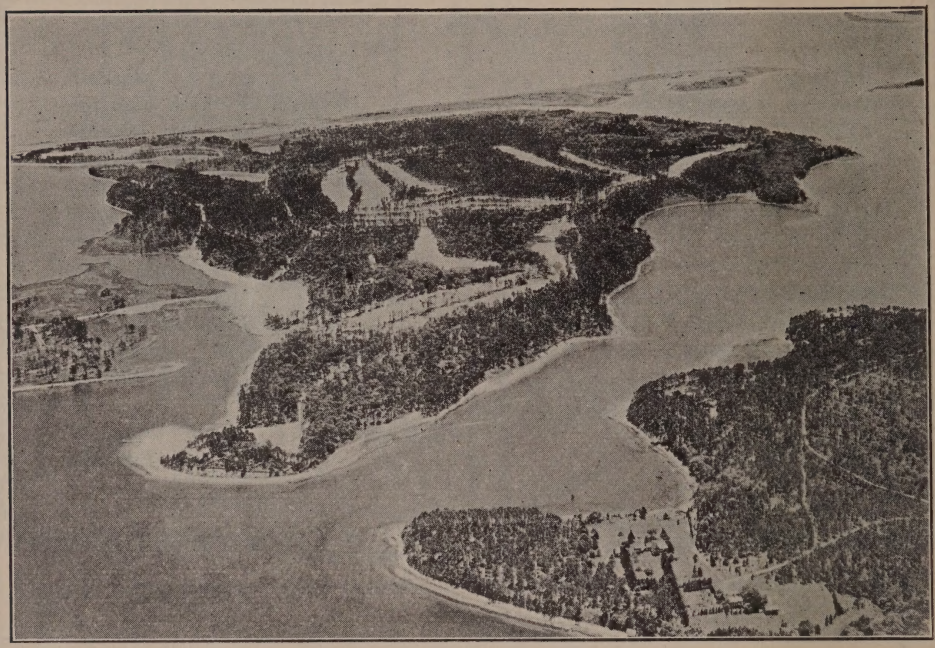
Road making — Art gallery

Junior Playhouse

Would you be interested in making a loan for some specific improvement?

OYSTER HARBORS

OSTERVILLE, MASS.



Aerial View of Oyster Harbors, Nantucket Sound in the background.

A COLONY OF SUBSTANTIAL AMERICAN HOMES

When you have built at Oyster Harbors—right at your door is a 6539 yard golf course, designed and constructed by Donald Ross and considered by experts to be one of America's finest.

If you are a yachtsman, all Nantucket Sound and beyond, Cotuit Bay, West Bay and North Bay await you. Along eight miles of shore front, nine harbors, some newly dredged, aflord shelter places for your craft immediately in front of your residence.

And there is bathing, tennis, riding and fishing, for other leisure hours.

Six miles of private woodland roads are now permanently surfaced.

Your neighbors will be such fold as you would personally select. Their homes, like yours, will be set in large plots among the pine-clad slopes of this 700-acre vacation Colony, in the heart of Cape Cod's most delightful social centers—Wianno, Cotuit and Osterville.

THE HEN

All along the farmyard gables the swallows sat a-row, twittering uneasily to one another, telling of many things, but thinking only of Summer and the South, for Autumn was afoot and the North wind waiting.

And suddenly one day they were all quite gone. And everyone spoke of the swallows and the South.

"I think I shall go South myself next year," said a hen.

And the year wore on and the swallows came again, and the year wore on and they sat again on the gables, and all the poultry discussed the departure of the hen.

And very early one morning, the wind being from the North, the swallows all soared suddenly and felt the wind in their wings; and a strength came upon them and a strange old knowledge and a more than human faith, and flying high they left the smoke of our cities and small remembered eaves, and saw at last the huge and homeless sea, and steering by grey sea-currents went southward with the wind. And going South they went by glittering fog-banks and saw old islands lifting their heads above them; they saw the slow quests of the wandering ships, and divers seeking pearls, and lands at war, till there came in view the mountains that they sought and the sight of the peaks they knew; and they descended into an austral valley, and saw Summer sometimes sleeping and sometimes singing song.

"I think the wind is about right," said the hen; and she spread her wings and ran out of the poultry-yard. And she ran fluttering out on to the road and some way down it until she came to a garden.

At evening she came back panting.

And in the poultry-yard she told the poultry how she had gone South as far as the high road, and saw the great world's traffic going by, and came to lands where the potato grew, and saw the stubble upon which men live, and at the end of the road had found a garden, and there were roses in it—beautiful roses!—and the gardener himself was there with his braces on.

"How extremely interesting," the poultry said, "and what a really beautiful description!"

And the Winter wore away, and the bitter months went by, and the Spring of the year appeared, and the swallows came again.

"We have been to the South," they said, "and the valleys beyond the sea."

But the poultry would not agree that there was a sea in the South: "You should hear our hen," they said.

NOTICE

Publicity in the Cape Playhouse Program is of a highly desirable class, and in season, 3,500 programs are issued each week, and a total of 30,000 for the season.

Approximately 90% of the persons of our audiences take their programs away with them. The fullest publicity is obtainable now by advertisers, and the Cape Playhouse program reaches a larger number of desirable purchasers than any other medium on the Cape.

The August issues of this Program are at the peak of the season. Spaces in them are limited and should be secured promptly. For further information see bottom of page 22.

THE CAPE PLAYHOUSE PROGRAM

It is not the intention or purpose of The Cape Playhouse, Dennis, Cape Cod, Massachusetts, to make a general canvass for advertising.

The Cape Playhouse program has nothing in common with the ordinary cosmopolitan theatre program. Neither are advertisements displayed on the curtain, by films or in any portion of the house.

The theatre's locale, its atmosphere, the high standing of its casts, devotion to the written drama, and the character of its patrons, will insure the program being retained for perusal and reference. While practicing no discrimination, we have and will have only selected advertisers in keeping with the appreciation and approbation of our patrons. Its composition and circulation will be in keeping with desirable ethics of publicity and free from annoyances from various sources.

A scrutiny of the list of advertisers will show shops, inns, hotels, tea-rooms and other business houses of a high grade who recognize the desirable character of our patrons and subscribers.

They have and are co-operating with our patrons and us in establishing this desirable feature on the Cape.

We earnestly trust that our patrons will favor them with their patronage.

Any information as to advertising should be addressed to

R. J. SLATER
